

A century of voices in 100 words

Kieran Steadman

Think of one hundred years

All the people that lived

Imagine what noises they made

What did they sound like?

There are so many voices
They are all so different
All the languages they spoke
And all the different accents.

Singing, laughing, telling a joke
Things a voice can do
Many things to talk about
Which one should they choose?

And speeches that they gave
For good and for bad
The changes that were made

Their voices young and old From all over the world Rich, poor, black or white All with something to say
